Frequently Asked Questions:

What is Guardianship?

- Guardianship involves the appointment by a court of a legally responsible individual or agency on behalf of a person who is not able to independently manage his or her affairs due to a disability or minor status (person under the age of 18).

How does guardianship differ from adoption?

- With adoption, birth parents give up all rights and responsibilities for the child. With guardianship, parents keep some of their rights and responsibilities. For instance, with guardianship, parents can visit the child or challenge the guardian's power and they can get custody back by going to court. Also, if able, the parents must contribute money to support the child. The guardian can seek this support in Child Support Court.

How does someone become a guardian?

- A petition for guardianship must be filed in the Clerk's Office. Once guardianship papers (the Petition) are filed with the court, parties appear in court in about three (3) to six (6) weeks. This time is used to let the parents (or interested party) know what is going on. The judge reviews the petition and, for guardianship of a minor, a background check is conducted on all potential guardians. Finally, a judge will make the determination of who will be appointed guardian.
